

Flexible support to keep pace with your business

Philips RightFit with Transition Assist

Philips Transition Assist is designed to help you manage the challenges of constant change. It gives you the flexibility to switch service agreements on your terms – to meet growing demands, changing regulations, and shifting business priorities.

With Transition Assist, you can start with a comprehensive Philips RightFit Service Agreement to get the depth and breadth of support to meet today's needs. Should those needs change, Transition Assist enables you to flex your service model, along with your RightFit Service Agreement. If your new service model includes developing an in-house team, Transition Assist provides easy access to the diagnostic tools, service documentation, OEM parts, and back-up support you need to succeed.

Working together

With RightFit Service Agreements your in-house engineers work side by side with Philips engineers to resolve service issues, while cultivating a close working relationship. They share planned maintenance and service event calls with the Philips engineering team, continually gaining new insights into how to keep the imaging systems performing at their peak. As your team develops its skills and system knowledge, Philips Transition Assist provides the ability to customize service support to align with your new capabilities.

To learn more

Philips Transition Assist is one more way we're showing our commitment to customers. To learn more about Transition Assist and the flexibility it provides, please contact your Philips Service Representative or call 1-800-229-6417.